

A Collar for Me?

The Foundation for Veterinary Aid International is an entirely Quebec based foundation dedicated to helping animals in foreign countries. At their request, we sterilize dogs and cats free of charge.

In these countries, the majority of dogs do not have collars because they are often inaccessible. A cord or a chain is used as a collar and ends up hurting the dog in the process.

FVAI would like to offer a collar free of charge to each dog treated during one of our clinics. The wearing of the collar signifies that the dog has received veterinary care and belongs to one, or in some cases, several people. Each child gets to choose the collar for their dog. This reinforces the bond with their dog and increases their sense of responsibility.

FVAI sterilizes between 150 and 200 animals during each of its humanitarian missions, therefore the need for collars is immense.

Would you like to give a second life to one of your collars?

Donate it here, share it, and pass it on!

Thank you for your generosity!
